Year-Round Fun

When David Schwank of Mosaic Outdoor Living & Landscapes first encountered this Castle Rock house, it had a rotting and dangerous deck in back—nothing conducive to the kind of indoor-outdoor living this family craved. “They wanted a space that they could use year round, took advantage of their mountain views, and expanded their living space to an indoor-outdoor space,” says Schwank. His team at Mosaic, famous for their HGTV show Mega Decks, created an enormous space with three distinct areas, including a dining room with a custom table and an outdoor kitchen complete with pizza oven, grill, and refrigerator, and a seating area around a huge natural stone fireplace with firebrick inside to give off lots of heat, topped by a steel and wood pergola. To provide for year-round use, Mosaic also added inset heaters to the soffits in the roof overhang. ●
